

ENTERTAINING & INFORMATIVE GROUP FLYFISHING DAYS

Whether its part of team building, or rewarding good clients, or staff - you will never look at a company golf day in the same light again.

Flyfishing allows people to escape to the most beautiful surroundings in the world where wild fish are found. The art of casting is so intricate that it is never truly mastered, hence trying for the perfect presentation of the fly is the most distracting thing imaginable, allowing the mind to truly cleanse itself of day to day worries. It is also the greatest leveler; someone with superior intellect, strength or height for instance, never has an advantage. For this reason it is the ideal corporate experience as secretaries and Managing Directors now compete on the same level! The aim of the session is to master the perfect cast, select the right fly and ultimately fool mother nature, by imitating nature. With this newly acquired skill and a little luck, may well result in the capture, and then release of your first trout.

The Mavungana team of instructors include 3 internationally certified guides, as well as up to 5 local instructors who have been teaching and guiding to individuals, as well as large corporate groups for many years. There is no larger more qualified team of instructors in the country, and they will all be at your disposal for the duration of your corporate event.

From a 30 minute crash course through to a couple of hours of an all round flyfishing introduction, its down to you how you wish to utilise your time, and make the most of your teams corporate day out.

CORPORATE FLYFISHING - SOMETHING DIFFERENT

Groups of two to forty two people at a time can be handled at once. The course involves a very entertaining while informative introductory talk lasting about fifteen minutes. After which most of the audience will be quite intrigued and eager to learn more. This is followed by a casting demonstration, laying down the basic theoretical principles, this lasts about fifteen minutes. Then the group is broken up into manageable teams and are distributed around the various lakes with their own equipment and instructor. No flies are used at first and the basic concept of fly-casting is soon mastered through the personnel attention and the renowned REFFIS teaching method. As the instructors identify keen and promising flyfisher people they progress onto being taught how to select and tie on their own flies and have a go at fooling the fish. Within half an hour most people will be controlling the line confidently and will also have been taught various aspects of reading the water, being able to make the right selection of fly and hopefully once everything goes according to plan, how to hook, land and release their first fish!

Above all the session is designed to be entertaining and fun while at the same time teaching a new and very challenging skill. We often incorporate a fun competition into the session, along with a selection of topical prizes, and the option of branded corporate gifts. We specialize in having company flies tied up, incorporating the corporate colours, and each fly individually mounted and framed as a memento for the special day. We supply all equipment and flies. No specialized clothing is needed. All that is needed for your guaranteed enjoyment, is a sense of humour, a splash of sun tan cream, and sunglasses to protect your eyes.

We work on a session of two hours for a group of beginners, i.e. those that have never picked up a fly rod in their lives before and two flies per angler per session. We travel to any venue, as well as book with renowned country lodges. For cheaper options we have reputable self catering accommodation and then use our own waters. We tailor make weekends and days specifically for the clients needs, river fishing for more advanced fishermen, targeting specific fish species at more exotic and remote locations, waterside picnics, competitions with a variety of themes including prizes for the largest fish, and novelty categories including the likes of style, dress or lack of ability!
